

A Clinical Lecturer is fully trained to provide clinical care and is qualified to participate in educational programs at the University of Michigan Medical School. Some faculty members are appointed as Clinical Lecturers by the Medical School before moving into the Instructional Track or Clinical Track. Clinical Lecturers have shown competence as teachers and clinicians and hold a doctoral degree or its equivalent in professional and technical experience.