

Adjunct Instructional Track

Adjunct Instructional Faculty appointments are used to supplement teaching in a specific field; to facilitate research collaboration with individuals in other units of the School or University, with individuals at other educational or health care institutions, or with scientists employed by industry; or to permit faculty or trainees who are leaving the University to complete ongoing educational or research responsibilities.

Adjunct Clinical Lecturer is fully trained to provide clinical care and is qualified to participate in educational programs at the University of Michigan Medical School. Adjunct Clinical Lecturers have shown competence as teachers and clinicians and hold a doctoral degree or its equivalent in professional and technical experience.